"How weightless words are when nothing will do."

- Philip Levine

It does bother me that I'm the asshole. Whether or not it's a perceived status, or much like the musher's dream, a dark and cold run – I can't be sure. But what I see in faces, body language and words is no longer beautiful. Maybe it never was, and I'm now realizing what the ravens have known all along.
I have withdrawn the galaxy, the sedated bull resting in my lungs, returned a wounded soldier, limping down my father's long dirt driveway blonde in the southern sun.
