Gravity Wrinkles

by E. P. H.

A seasonal change
An atmospheric disruption
A motivational change of emotions
The drama unfolds:
Feelings of incongruent intelligence
fill a swelling void.
A rapture of green grass and melting leaves,
We are creatures controlled by mere seasonal fluctuations.
Simple of mind, pregnant with infatuation,
Do we desire the power we fear,
The power incomprehensible?
The grey mists defy the gravity of a mass beyond strength.
Cloud our sight, a thickening veil descends upon human intension.
Do not falter upon the fallacy of divine intervention,
You control
A mass gift.

I Want to Kill My Roommate

by Michael Anthony Moore

Can you hear it?
MOVE, MOVE, MOVE, MOVE, MOVE!
That’s what I’m trying to say...
Something’s coming,
An upward sweep of notes,
A flash of light,
And then...
Nothing.
