

AN ANECDOTE: AGILE ACROBAT AVOIDS ACCIDENT

LIONEL R. SIMARD

North Syracuse, New York

Alma Anderson, an avid American amateur acrobat, asked admiringly, "Are all Asians as agile as Anita Akihito?"

"Assuredly," answered Albert Adams, an able and accomplished author. "Asians and Africans are as athletic and artistic as any able-bodied American," added Albert, as an admiring audience appreciatively applauded all accomplishments above.

Anita Akihito attracted additional attention, attempting another audacious act. "Awesome!" acclaimed astonished adolescents, all aspiring acrobats. "Absolutely amazing!" As attractive Anita advanced adeptly along, an awkward acceleration and—an accident! Ayyy! Aghast and appalled, all attendees anticipated approaching adversity. An astounded audience, an anxious atmosphere. Anita actively avoided additional agony, alighting adroitly. All approvingly applauded Anita's aptitude and agility. All abandoned Arnold Auditorium alleviated and appeased.

As always, Anita's achievements accrued admirers' accolades across America, Asia, Australia, Africa...
