A Collaborative Approach to Building a Student Information and Technology Literacy Program

Kenetha Stanton

Julianne Miranda
Butler University, jmiranda@butler.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.butler.edu/it_presentations

Part of the Instructional Media Design Commons, and the Library and Information Science Commons

Recommended Citation

This Presentation is brought to you for free and open access by the Center for Academic Technology at Digital Commons @ Butler University. It has been accepted for inclusion in Presentations by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ Butler University. For more information, please contact digitalscholarship@butler.edu.
A Collaborative Approach to Building a Student Information and Technology Literacy Program

Kenetha J. Stanton Frisby, MLS
Julianne M. Miranda, CPCC
Butler University, Indianapolis, IN History

• Few resources on campus to support student curricular use of technology
• Library reference desk seeing an increase in numbers of technology-related questions from students
• Instructional Technology getting increased requests from faculty members to provide curriculum-based technology training for students
Information Commons

• Student professional development program jointly sponsored by Instructional Technology and the Library
• Shared mentorship of students in program
• Peer-to-peer training program with
  • scheduled desk hours
  • consulting time
  • scheduled training sessions
Guiding Principles

• Curricular technology support
• Professional development
  • Customer service/co-active coaching skills
  • Creation of artifacts for a professional portfolio
  • Define and understand an instructional design model (ADDIE)
  • Project-based learning
• Reflective practice
  • Reflective writings
  • Blog entries
  • Assessments of self-paced instructional modules ePortfolio

- Résumé
- Reflective writings
- Self-paced instructional module
- Departmental projects
  - Training documentation examples
  - Multimedia training artifacts
  - Marketing materials
- Other artifacts
  - Annotated bibliographies
  - Letters of recommendation or appreciation

One thing I have learned is that I have to be creative and it is online or in a cabinet. Box. Box When looking for something needed. Whatever I am looking for is either checked out. I cannot just stay in the cabinet. Eventually, I find it. Having a plan is helpful. For something that might have a plan. Plan a place but somebody could say anything because the search is the right answer. In databases, you h
Lessons Learned

- Decentralized nature of program and geographic separation creates unique challenges
- Student perception vs. our perception of program
- Retreat is foundational

  “I believe the retreat was the best part of the program. I really enjoyed the bonding experience and I learned a lot of new information.”

- Students mentoring students
- Team-based activities
- Continued expansion of the use of ePortfolio
For More Information

For additional information about this program or to obtain a copy of the forthcoming white paper, please contact:

Julianne M. Miranda, CPCC
Sr. Director, Instructional Technology
Associate Professor of Music jmiranda@butler.edu
317-940-4663

Kenetha J. Stanton Frisby, MLS
Instructional Technology Services Coordinator kfrisby@butler.edu
317-940-8533