Timeless
Commissioned by Jubilate Chorale, Brockton Massachusetts, Maxine M. Asselin, Music Director, and Evelyn A. Sellstone in loving memory of John Stanley Sellstone and in celebration of the Chorale's 25th Anniversary.

Text: Jay Enos

Music by: James Mulholland

Slow

Moderately Fast (M. = 80 D. = 120)

It is our note, this note we sing,

This voice we echo
from time stood still,___

A voice which rings from souls of kings,___

This is ours, our minds, our will.
It is our note,

A Tempo
this note we sing,

This voice we echo

from time stood still,
A voice which rings from souls of kings, This is ours, Great passions of then, great hearts of now, An erst-while stream of love and how, How do we form that stream and be That A little faster

Great passions of then.

passion, that love, great mystery?

R.H.

Great passions of then.

great hearts of now. An erst-while stream of love and how, How do we form that stream and be That passion, that love, great mystery?
Great passions of then,
great hearts of now,
An erst-while stream of love and how,

It is to lose ourselves to purity to purity pur-i-ty  The pur-est note,  se-ren-i-ty,  seren-i-ty.  This is our note,  this note we This voice we echo from time stood still, A voice which sing, This voice we echo from time stood still,

rings from souls of kings.

This is ours our minds, our

It is our note,

A Tempo
This note we sing,

This voice we

This voice we

From time stood still,

From time stood still.

Ech-0
A voice which rings____ from souls of kings,____ This is ours,____ our minds, our will.

Not too slow  (\( \frac{4}{4} = 92 \))

So, now we celebrate Which is now and shall ever be our time-less note

legato, full voice

no breath
As pure and white as drifting snow,

So, now we celebrate our time-less, time-less note.
which is now and shall ever be

Great passion’s immortality.