Two Poems

Ryo Yamaguchi

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.butler.edu/booth

Recommended Citation
Retrieved from: https://digitalcommons.butler.edu/booth/vol7/iss12/2

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by Digital Commons @ Butler University. It has been accepted for inclusion in Booth by an authorized editor of Digital Commons @ Butler University. For more information, please contact digitalscholarship@butler.edu.
Two Poems

Abstract
Poems include "Quarter" and "Decide".

Cover Page Footnote
Two Poems was originally published at Booth.

This article is available in Booth: https://digitalcommons.butler.edu/booth/vol7/iss12/2 Quarter

With the rhythm breaking cleanly over us; you stepping so well through the decision, blocking out quarter-lengths in the swiftly rearranging seconds crisscrossing the sidewalk. Your heart is full of blood; we see a movie and a forest grows though it. The evening is flat in areas and elsewhere brindled with slippages, and I believe what you say when you say it, putting your body through one deliberate motion, the air plentiful, and we watch for the minutes as the universe falls into its assortment of jobs. There is a matter, you think, that must be what all this weight is for, a relative equivalent of your architectural sleep, and I think this, too, with brightness, along the uneven blocks of the neighborhood, that a plot could be cajoled out of management, the sun coming up warm over the necessary and the stranger standing there looking at us.
Decide

We live through a compression of nights like the underbelly of an airplane lit bald as it slows toward the dark earth.

The rescue is merely finishing the work, emptying out the lists and being moved. We walk down to the street and say yes; we say it twice, drawing a line around ourselves with our breath.

The sensation of falling. Through our eyelids a dissipating blue.

The force of line. An ontic guttural, standing contestant sprung into the hot edge of the immediate where the promise is lit, our new mathematics, our new sleep.

Ryo Yamaguchi is the author of The Refusal of Suitors, published by Noemi Press. His poetry has appeared in journals such as The Iowa Review, Tin House, and The Journal, among others. He also regularly reviews books for outlets such as NewPages and Michigan Quarterly Review. He lives in Chicago where he works at the University of Chicago Press. You can visit him at plotsandoaths.com.