

A TEN-YEAR TOPICAL INDEX

The following index has been designed to help the reader locate specific types of wordplay appearing in the first ten years of Word Ways. Related articles and notes are grouped together, according to a taxonomy which has evolved over the last several years (an earlier version was used in the Five-Year Topical Index in November 1972). Briefly, the central core of logology is presently viewed as consisting of (1) letter-patterns in words, (2) operations upon letters in words, and (3) relationships between letters and sounds. (The second topic was amplified in "The Word-Surgeon's Compendium" in the August 1976 Word Ways.) Surrounding this core is the ill-defined intersection of logology with three older branches of wordplay or study: (1) word games and puzzles (Scrabble, crosswords, cryptograms, and the more specialized play of the National Puzzlers' League), (2) literary wordplay (long palindromes, the E-less novel Gadsby) and puns, and (3) academic language study (particularly word usage, meanings and etymology). Wordplay involving special sets of words (presidents, statenames, words ending in -dous) is separately indexed.

Each article is cited by year and page; thus, 74-112 directs the reader to page 112 of the 1974 volume. If two or more consecutive articles in a sequence are in the same year, the year appears only at the start of the sequence. Articles in parentheses contain follow-up material; the year is omitted if they follow in an issue or two. The letter q, f, p or b following a citation identifies it as a special format: a quiz (not used in III. C. 1,2), a fictional or humorous article (not used in III. A. 3), a poem (not used in II. A. 2) or a book or journal review (not used in I).
