Inspired by John Meyer's challenge in "A Positional Word List" in the May 1978 Word Ways, I decided to look for nine-letter words in which the central letter takes each alphabetical value, and both four-letter ends are words. Finding this task too easy for most central letters, I decided to restrict myself to nonpattern words (all nine letters different). This proved impossible for only J and Z; for Q, I was unable to find any suitable nine-letter word, even allowing repeated letters.

A bergalith, bungalow, crusading, overawing, signatory, verbalist
B crumbling, overblack, plumbate, rainbowed, shoeblack
C bluecoats, foreclaws, goldcrest, redocking, shipcraft, slipcover
D archdevil, boardlike, cauldrife, markdowns, snowdrift
E bothing, outsearch, pocketing, posterial, spadework, twinebush
F backfired, campfires, goldfinch, overflush, scarflike, snowflake
G clangours, kilograms, portglave, vainglory, wildgrave
H crushable, marshbuck, overhands, semihoral, brightens
I aluminose, centigram, dentiform, handiwork, rantipole, studiable
J backjawed, flapjacks
K blockhead, flankwise, sparkling, thinkable
L architures, betalking, crawlsome, panelwork, ricelands
M claymores, coinmates, polemarch, quagmired, tidemarks
N brownnail, cavendish, lamentory, ravenduck, thornlike
O bestowing, chamoline, clamoring, pictograms, shadowily
P bedspring, conspired, outspread, trampling, wordplays
Q
R bakership, caperbush, mayorship, sideronym, underplay
S backstrip, brimstone, cornstalk, curbstone, plowshare, rainspout
T bedstring, bucktails, heartsick, sidetrack, worktable,
U consulate, costuming, overusing, posturing, spinulate, vesturing

X planxties, trioxides
Y chalybite, condylure, curlyhead, mealywing, pansylike, toadyship
Z waltzlike, wheezling

Space prevents adding many more words to this list; have I overlooked any examples better than the ones above?
