Editor's Note: Few English words contain letters with diacritical marks (accents, umlauts, tildes, cedillas, circumflexes and the like), most of these being foreign borrowings. Hence, the following bit of Czech wordplay is impossible to duplicate in English. This translation was provided by Harry Partridge of Manhattan Beach, CA (translator notes in parentheses).

This article lists words in Czech having a diacritical mark over every letter -- that is, the little line, the little hook, or the little circle. There are fifteen different letters that can be used:

á é é í ň ó ř š ú ú ý ž

Examples of such words are:

3-letter číč (goblet) (poetical form)
čís (empire) (rare form)
čít (width)
čít (literary form of číček, 'siskin')

4-letter číčí (it is blowing; there is a draft)
čís (apparently the adjectival form of čís) čítí (he/she/lt enlarges/dilates/expatiates)

5-letter číčíč (apparently the adjectival form of číček)
číčís (thou enlargest/dilatest/expatiatest)

6-letter žídaríš (the name of a forest)

7-letter říčícar (sievemaker)

The word is derived from říčice (sieve) which, to be sure, does not fully meet the conditions of this article because the short í is the normal letter instead of í, however, it is said to be very common here and there as a family name - Rudě právo, 1964
