WELCOME TO THE SHAKESPEAREAN TELESONNET PROGRAM. IF YOU WILL TYPE YOUR PHONE NUMBER AND A FRIEND'S, I WILL CREATE A NEW SHAKESPEAREAN SONNET. TRY IT.

WHAT IS YOUR PHONE NUMBER? 252-6294
WHAT IS YOUR FRIEND'S NUMBER? 608-0936
THOSE ARE TRICKY NUMBERS. HMM... LET ME SEE... WHAT SHALL I WRITE? AH, HERE IT IS!

SHAKESPEAREAN TELESONNET NO. 25262946080936

By looking on thee in the living day,
O let me, true in love, but truly write,
That I might see what the old world could say
And moan th' expense of many a vanish'd sight.
I grant I never saw a goddess go;
Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe,
As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's air:
When I have seen such interchange of state,
Bound for the prize of all-too-precious you,
Such civil war is in my love and hate
And I by this will be a gainer too;
Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be,
If ten of thine ten times refigur'd thee.

The Shakespearean Telesonnet Program takes up where the Bard of Avon left off. Using 70 of his lines, the program can generate any of 61,036,015,625 new sonnets. Writing the program was easy, but selecting the lines was a balancing act between rhyme and reason. Out of Shakespeare's original 2,156 lines, I picked 14 sets of 10 lines that rhymed; but when the new sonnets flashed down the screen, there were awkward grammatical jumps from line to line. I pared the sets down to 5 lines apiece, and that solved the problem.

Anyone who knows a little BASIC programming should be able to write their own version. Aside from the computer's "introduction" here's the heart of the program. When you type two 7-digit phone numbers after the two questions, the computer reads the numbers in order, one digit at a time. If a digit is between 0 and 4, it goes to the first set of lines. (If greater than 4, it subtracts 5 and uses the new digit instead.) When it finds the line identified by that digit, it lists the line on the screen. Then it loops back to the next digit in the phone number sequence and repeats the process for the next set of lines, and so on to the last digit. Be‐before you can say "honorificabilitudinitatibus," a telesonnet twinkles on the screen.

Without the program, you can still figure out any telesonnet by going from set to set and picking one of the two digits on the left side that corresponds to each digit in the 2 phone numbers. For reference, each number on the right denotes the source sonnet and the line number. The lines were mined from the New Cambridge Shakespeare (Houghton Mifflin, 1942).
