Overhead
by Linda Shay

There was a girl who once lived overhead. She had a husband and a stationary bicycle beside her bed.

After dinner, she would pedal, and create a steady roar. Sometime after midnight she would moan and ask for more.

At the time, I had no boyfriend and her life sounds made me wince, but she moved with her husband and her bicycle, and I've had two sweethearts since.