

Oppression indiscreet

by Rebecca Horne

a nuance of a guided hand and there are words you spill and you try to wipe them up before i see their sticky masses dry on our wooden floor and over us you hang those ancient fat purple grapes and they stain our white muslin walls when they drip sickly sweet