

EVA, EH? IN A CAN I HEAVE!

JOHN E. CONNETT

Minneapolis, Minnesota

In I Love Me, Vol. I, Mike Donner recognizes a handful of palindromes involving Eva and a cave, including "Eva, can I pose as Aesop in a cave" and "Eva, can I stab bats in a cave?," both attributed to Leigh Mercer, and "Eva can, I see, bone no bees in a cave," by J.A. Lindon. However, there's lot's more that can be said about our troglodytic Eva:

Eva, can I evade Dave in a cave?
 Eva, can I put a Manet (torn, rotten, a mat) in a cave?
 Eva, can I repaper a bare paper in a cave?
 Eva, can I revolt a fat lover in a cave?
 Eva, can I revolt a ram, a ham, a rat-lover in a cave?
 Eva, can I slap my gym pals in a cave?
 Eva, can I stack Rod's sad-ass dork cats in a cave?
 Eva, can I stir grits in a cave?
 Eva, can I push Tom's moths up in a cave?
 Eva, can I cram Marc in a cave?
 Eva, can I drape Mal's lame pard in a cave?
 Eva, can I put a caret, a tater, a cat up in a cave?
 Eva, can I put a ham or a bib-aroma hat up in a cave?
 Eva, can I race Mal's lame car in a cave?
 Eva, can I repel a leper in a cave?
 Eva, can I startle felt rats in a cave?
 Eva, can I strap nine metal plate-men in parts in a cave?
 Eva, can I tar a mama rat in a cave?

What can one say about Eva's relationship with her palindromic soulmate, Dave?

Eva: "Did I dial Okinawa, Nikolai? Did I, Dave?"
 Eva: "Did I drag a gar? Did I, Dave?"
 Eva: "Did I dive, Levi? Did I, Dave?"
 Eva, do togs go to Dave?
 Eva, do "teehee" to Dave
 Eva, do tune my menu to Dave
 Eva, do I dare to vote? Radio Dave!
 Eva, do trail a liar to Dave
