

3-2011

March 2011 - Digital Minute Issue 9

Brad Matthies

Butler University, bmatthie@gmail.com

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.butler.edu/digital_minute

Part of the Archival Science Commons

Recommended Citation

Matthies, Brad, "March 2011 - Digital Minute Issue 9" (2011). Digital Minute. 9.
http://digitalcommons.butler.edu/digital_minute/9

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the University Libraries at Digital Commons @ Butler University. It has been accepted for inclusion in Digital Minute by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ Butler University. For more information, please contact omacisaa@butler.edu.

Digital Minute

Previous Issues

Read previous issues of Digital Minute.

BU Digital Collections

Visit our Digital Commons and Digital Images Collection.

Need research?

You can search across 120 institutional repositories!

Published by

Brad Matthies
bmatthie@butler.edu

Edited by

Marcy Wilhelm
mwilhelm@butler.edu

Know someone who wants a SelectedWorks page or who would like to contribute? Have them contact bmatthie@butler.edu.

Challenging Open Access Stereotypes

When scholars think about institutional repository content, they typically look to traditional scholarly content: journal articles, working papers, and select book chapters. Indeed data from OpenDOAR supports this assertion:

However, a recent Chronicle article points out the value of scholars making their presentations available online:

“When you’re giving a talk, your audience isn’t limited anymore to just the people in the room — one microblogger can transmit your ideas to the world... For this reason and several others, I think scholars should always publish their presentations.

A final choice might be your college or university’s institutional repository: check with your friendly local librarian to see if your organization has one and how you can use it to store and publish your work online.”

Presentations @ Butler Digital Commons

The following is a selection of exemplary presentations held in our Digital Commons:

- Provost Comstock has several excellent examples including a presentation that discusses current issues in higher education
- Sally Neal and others present about the development of an online tutorial
- Amanda Gingerich serves as a model for how the Digital Commons can be used to publish Power Point Presentations and poster sessions (be sure to click on “Related Files” at the bottom of the record)

Interested in adding Power Point presentations and related content to your Selected Works page? To get started just e-mail Brad Matthies!

Please share this newsletter with your colleagues!