

10-1-2012

The Housekeeper and the Professor, by Yoko Ogawa, Picador, 2009

Eloise Sureau-Hale

Butler University, esureau@butler.edu

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.butler.edu/las\_bookreviews

---

Recommended Citation

Sureau-Hale, Eloise, "The Housekeeper and the Professor, by Yoko Ogawa, Picador, 2009" (2012). LAS Faculty Book Reviews. 115.
http://digitalcommons.butler.edu/las\_bookreviews/115

This Book Review is brought to you for free and open access by the College of Liberal Arts & Sciences at Digital Commons @ Butler University. It has been accepted for inclusion in LAS Faculty Book Reviews by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ Butler University. For more information, please contact omacisaa@butler.edu.

Because Ideas Matter...

The faculty and staff of Butler University's College of Liberal Arts and Sciences presents

Recommended Readings

The Housekeeper and the Professor

by Yoko Ogawa, Picador, 2009

Reviewed by Eloise Sureau-Hale

This is the story of a most unusual encounter. A young Japanese single mother who works as a housekeeper is sent by her agency to take care of an elderly man. The victim of a terrible car accident, he is unable to remember more than 80 minutes at a time. Every day starts anew for the housekeeper who must take great care not to shatter the old man's illusion of belonging to a past that is long gone.

The old professor of mathematics welcomes the housekeeper as a stranger every day, relying on pictures and pieces of scribbled information pinned on his jacket for keepsake. As the professor openly shares his passion for numbers, the housekeeper slowly learns to speak the language of mathematics, a common tongue between people living in two completely different worlds.

Little by little, a friendship develops between the housekeeper who brings balance in the old man's life, the professor whose life is governed by numbers, and the housekeeper's young son that the old man nicknames Root and loves like a grandson.

Set in the early 1990's Japan and told from the perspective of the housekeeper long after the events took place, as the story unfolds it grips the reader with its impeccable description of the agony of living life one hour at a time, both for the person entrapped in this inferno, and for those around him. Yet, it is not a sad tale.

Those who have enjoyed novels like Still Alice by Lisa Genova and A Fine Balance by Rohinton Mistry will delight in The Housekeeper and the Professor.

- Eloise Sureau-Hale is associate professor of French at Butler University.