WORDPLAY MINIATURES

DMITRI A. BORGMAN

In this article, we introduce Word Ways readers to the wordplay miniature -- a special form of the familiar crossword puzzle. In the title, the term miniature refers to its size; all puzzles presented below are square arrays consisting of five horizontal five-letter words intersected by five vertical five-letter words. (Because of the simplicity of this array, we have deemed it unnecessary to supply the puzzler with a grid of squares to be filled in for each puzzle; a blank sheet of paper should be adequate.)

Wordplay, the other half of the title, requires considerably more explanation. In the usual crossword puzzle, the clue for a word is a synonym or short definition. In contrast, words can be defined in terms of their visual or aural peculiarities (for example, palindromes or homonyms) or in relation to other words that they resemble (for example, transposals or deletions).

For the benefit of the newcomer, we briefly define wordplay-oriented terms that he will encounter in the puzzle definitions:

Palindrome - a word spelled the same backward as forward (ROTOR)
Reversal - a word which, spelled backward, results in a different word (RECAP to PACER)
Transposal (transposition) - a word formed by rearranging the letters of another word (EDGER to GREED)
Transaddition - a transposal in which a letter has been added (DEER to EDGER)
Transdeletion - a transposal in which a letter has been subtracted (GEARED to EDGER)
Letter Deletion (letter subtraction) - a word formed by removing a letter from another word (LOUVER to LOVER)
Curtailment - a letter deletion in which the last letter is removed (SINGER to SINGE)
Beheadment - a letter deletion in which the first letter is removed (STRIPE to TRIPE)
Letter Addition - a word formed by adding a letter to another word (BEAN to BEGAN)
Letter Change - a word formed when one of the letters of a word is replaced by another (CHEAT to CLEAT)
Letter Shift - a word formed by shifting each letter in a word the same number of alphabetic steps (CHEER to JOLLY, 7 steps)

Homonym - a word having the same pronunciation as another word, but spelled differently (CITE and SIGHT)

Heteronym - a word having the same spelling as another word, but pronounced differently (TARRY, resembling tar, and TARRY, to linger)

Charade - a word which can be divided into two or more component words (LOTUS to LOT, US)

Words can be buried in sentences. Examine the following sentence carefully: the men downed German oreads. You will find that the sentence includes eight five-letter buried words: theme, he-men, emend, endow, owned, edger, manor, and reads.

All of the tricks exemplified above have been used in the miniature crosswords that follow, as have others that need no advance explanation. To make the problem more challenging, we have often replaced a word with its definition. To illustrate, instead of describing LEAST as a transposal of TALES, we can equally well define it as a transposition of "stories". Words in quotation marks are always definitions taking the place of more direct but also more revealing words.

In the case of charades, we have invariably used definitions or paraphrases to replace the individual words. Such definitions or paraphrases are followed by the notation (2 words) or (3 words) to indicate into how many short words we have chopped the original five-letter word. When you encounter a seemingly ridiculous "sentence" clue not followed by such a notation, you will be safe in assuming that you are to look for a buried word.
