ONE MORE CHARADE CROSSWORD

ERNST THEIMER
Rumson, New Jersey

Editor's Note: In the August 1970, August 1971, August 1983 and May 1984 issues of Word Ways, Ernst Theimer introduced the charade crossword to readers. The first two paragraphs below, explaining the nature of this puzzle, are repeated from the 1971 article.

Of all crossword puzzles, I find the charade crossword the most enjoyable. In this type of crossword, the clues do not directly define the word to be found. The word is buried as a charade in a sentence; for example, the word outing is contained in the seventh, eighth and ninth words of the sentence "It costs money to keep a runabout in gas, every young man soon learns." If this sentence were presented as the clue, the solution would be relatively simple. Instead, the word is removed from the sentence, and a new clue sentence (or set of sentences) is formed using the remaining letters in the same order: for example, "It costs money to keep a run, a base very young man soon learns (6)." The integer at the end of the sentence indicates the number of letters removed. The reader now has the much more challenging task of deducing the word from its absence instead of its presence.
The more normal-sounding the new sequence, the more difficult the solution.

Proper construction requires that the word to be determined by the reader must fit inside a word of the clue, not between two words. Also, it is desirable that the word be a true charade in the original sentence, that is, tied at each end. Thus, the out of outing becomes a part of the word runabout, and the g becomes a part of gas. Naturally, these requirements add to the difficulty of construction.

In the puzzle below, there are three proper names (Horizontal 20; Vertical 2, 4) and five less-than-common words (Horizontal 2, 24; Vertical 7, 8, 29).

The answer to the puzzle given on the following two facing pages can be found in Answers and Solutions at the end of this issue. All answers are given in original puzzle-clue form and the expanded form that results when the answer word is inserted in the proper place.
