Manuscripts

Words on Fire

It is impossible to escape this dialectic
To be aware that one is burning is to grow cold
To feel an intensity is to diminish it
It is necessary to be an intensity without realizing it
Such is the bitter law of man's existence

Author Unknown

Butler University
Indianapolis, Indiana

Volume 61, No. 2
Spring 1993
The editors and staff wish to thank the English Department for their support and encouragement. A special thanks to Dr. Hilene Flanzbaum, our new faculty advisor, and also to Shirley Daniell for her patience and suggestions. -MAC
Table of Contents

1. Imprecision.................................................................Mark A. Clements
2. Landscape with Grandmother........................................Rusty C. Moe
3. Iowa Summer..............................................................Linnea Leatherman
10. Death on Wheels.......................................................Melanie McNamara
17. Photograph (untitled)..................................................Karen Johnson, ΣΤΔ
19. Gestus.................................................................Rusty C. Moe
26. Sky Swallowed Smoke................................................Kurt A. Lindsey
28. Outside My Window, selected chapters.........................John Strott
37. WACO.................................................................Nathan Houston
39. Katabasis.............................................................Rusty C. Moe
40. Orphan.................................................................Shannon Murphy
41. Lost and Found.......................................................Tiffany Myers, ΣΤΔ
48. Exit Wounds Are Big..................................................Stephen L. Rose
58. To Illustrate a Point...................................................Mark A. Clements
61. Running With Scissors...............................................Tiffany Myers, ΣΤΔ

Cover Art and Sketches by Shuhong
Dedicated to Eve
yes, Eve without whom none of this would have been possible