LONG PALINDROMES FROM A TO Z

JEFF GRANT
Hastings, New Zealand

Since The Palindromicon was produced back in 1991, Dan Tilque and I have been searching for new 'dromes in an effort to increase the collection from its original 2332 specimens up to 4004. This target has now almost been reached, and we hope to have Palindromicon 2 published in the appropriate year 2002.

Many of the longest palindromes are two- or multi-word terms, foreign words, coinages, made-up personal and business names, extended exclamations, and such.

Here are the longest solid-form palindromes so far found for each letter of the alphabet. Note that placenames and surnames have been included. A number of these long examples will be familiar to palindrome lovers, but I'm sure there are some that haven't been exhibited before.
