600 TRANSPOSALS OF UK PLACE NAMES

DARRYL FRANCIS
Sutton, Surrey, England
darrylfrancis@yahoo.co.uk

The May 1990 issue of Word Ways carried an article of mine entitled “London Wordplay”. This was an examination of transposals, transadditions, beheadments and a variety of other wordplay based on place names in and around London, England.

I recently decided to take a trip—a virtual trip—around Great Britain (England, Scotland, Wales) to search for place names that had genuine English-language transposals. I wanted to get away from the London emphasis of my earlier article and discover transposals of place names out around the country. Transposals of some of the larger British cities and towns have appeared in Word Ways and other sources before (e.g. MANCHESTER searchmcnt, LANCASTER ancestral), and I didn’t particularly want to rehash those here. I concentrated on lesser-known places. Indeed, most of the place names mentioned in this article were unknown to me.

I used LeXpert, the Scrabble player’s software tool, to help me find transposals. I could have searched Webster’s Third as well, but decided not to, in order to keep things relatively simple. So, all the transposals presented in the following list are courtesy of LeXpert, with four (asterisked) exceptions. The counties in which the place names are found are given in brackets with full names at the end of the article.

Which placename has the most transposals? TANGIERS angriest astringe ganister gantrie ingrates rangiest reasting stearing tasering and IRSTEAD aridest asterid a tride diaster disrate staider stai red tardies tirades each have nine. Note that GLEN SHIRA and HALSINGER are mutual transposals, as are LESWALT, SATWELL and STAWEll. My favorite is EARL- FIELD alderflies, because I once (1977-80) lived there and never noticed its valid transposal!
